GETTING READY FOR THE FAIR.

Final plans are rapidly rounding into shape for the formal opening of the Medina County Fair here Sat- urday, November 8, for four days.

The event will be ushered in by a grand opening parade at ten o'clock Saturday morning. A big race meet will feature every afternoon and a big rodeo show every night.

Several football and basketball games will be played during the progress of the Fair, the Queen's Coronation will attract a large attendance Monday night, and the Queen's Ball on Tuesday night will be the grand finale.

There should be a splendid array of exhibits, as the premiums are sufficient to induce any one who has worthwhile products—and they are plentiful in Medina County this year—to compete for them.

Keep the dates in mind and plan to see the Medina County Fair.

INCORPORATION PETITION FILED.

The petition for another election to determine whether or not Hondo shall incorporate for municipal pur- poses under the commission form has been filed with County Judge R. J. Noonan in due form and awaits his action.

The Judge says the matter will have his attention as soon as he can get to it in regular course with other matters needing his consideration, and the election will probably be set for the early part of December.

Attention is called to the notice of Judge Haass, published elsewhere in this paper, in which he asks the vot- ers to write his name in the proper blank on the ticket in the election in November as a candidate for County Attorney. County Attorney D. C. Brown resigned after it was late for any one else to have their names printed on the ballot, hence this re- quest to his friends to write in his name.

Joe Dillon, manager of the Chevro- let Company of Hondo attended a business conference of Chevrolet dealers in Houston over the week- end. The dominating note was busi- ness optimism and the confident ex- pectation of all that the Chevrolet people are facing an era of renewed trade prosperity.

The editor and lady acknowledge receipt of a season complimentary ticket to the Medina County Fair to be held in Hondo November 8, 9, 10 and 11, 1930. The Fair, while one of the last of the season in South- west Texas, promises to be one of the best.

From all over this section of the county come complaints that a kind of an army worm is doing serious damage to the oat crop. It is hoped that cooler weather will put an end to their devastation before serious losses have been sustained.

THE MOST IMPORTANT ELECTION.

PROSPERITY is up for election, running to overthrow DE- PRESSION.

It's for the people to decide which will be chosen. Every man and every woman is privileged to ballot—every day.

DEPRESSION has no rightful place with a hundred and twenty million people, exchanging goods and services—capable—accustomed and willing to work—more highly skilled than other peoples—lead- ers in efficiency and progressiveness—backed by the vast natural resources of the United States. When we make it possible for the man who works to have a job we make it possible for him to buy food for his family and so help all business, including that of the farmer.

The rest of the world is of small importance compared with that free market of 120,000,000 people—homogeneous—of like tastes, habits and aspirations—living under the same laws—free of trade barriers. Foreign trade may be troubled by tariffs and revolutions, but at their peak our exports represented only five and a half billions of dollars of gross business in a year out of a total American income of ninety billions.

Stagnation of circulation is what's the matter with agriculture and with Business. Everyone can help to get that circulation moving again.

Government can't make Prosperity—alone. Bankers and other business leaders can't make Prosperity—alone. It's the people, united in opinion and purpose and courage, who determine Pros- perity. They can elect it—none other.

Ballots that will be validly counted for PROSPERITY are of many kinds. Some one of them every man and woman can cast. For example:

Help a deserving man or a woman to get a little paying work—or, better, a regular job.

Spend wisely and not too timidly, and anticipate scheduled expenditures so far as is practicable.

Turn the deaf ear to false, mischievous rumors; and don't repeat them, if you do hear them.

Be willing to pay a fair price. Don't take advantage of the other man's necessity. Recognize that he has as good claim to a fair profit as you.

When a vampire that fattens on the miseries of others shows up, help to make him unpopular.

Discourage calamity howlers.

Keep business moving evenly, and remember that, to the average man, his job is his particular business. When possible, reassure him against his fear of losing it.

Save, but save wisely, not in fright. Invest for the profit that sound enterprise pays and for the added profit that will come after the hysteria of pessimism has passed.

MERCHANTS, SET THE EXAMPLE BY BUYING ADVERTISING IN YOUR HOME TOWN PAPER.

TO THE VOTERS OF MEDINA COUNTY.

I hereby announce for the office of County Attorney of Medina County (made vacant by the resignation and removal from the county of D. C. Brown, Esq., who is not a candi- date for re-election) and I respect- fully ask your support and vote at the general election, Tuesday, No- vember 4, 1930, and if elected will qualify and serve to the best of my ability.

You will kindly write my name in the blank on the Official Ballot under the office of County Attorney in the blank column as provided by law.

Yours to serve,
H. E. HAASS.

BUSINESS CHANGE.

Garland Martin has purchased from Mrs. Henry Rothe, Sr., the Rothe corner store building at the intersec- tion of North Front Street and Ban- dera Avenue. Mr. Martin has re- moved the ancient gallery roofs that have been an eyesore for years, is reconstructing the sidewalks, re- novating and repairing the building throughout and will repaint the en- tire front, adding materially to the improved appearance of the corner.

When completed, the building will be occupied on a long-time lease by the Dillion Chevrolet Co. with a Chevrolet Sales and Service business second to none found outside of the larger cities.

GOV. DAN MOODY, AND JOHN W. CARPENTER.

Gov. Dan Moody, guest of honor, and John W. Carpenter, toastmaster, are shown above arriving at the East Texas Dinner in their all Texas-made clothes. Though the suits were of white cotton Gov. Moody declared that "Texas-made clothes are never out of season."

Gov. Moody declared that East Texas in its natural beauty shows the hand of the Divine, and that while its present is romantic and developing, its future cannot be foretold by anything short of divine foresight. "All Texas is great," stated the Governor. "We are proud of every section of it. When we go out of the State and people ask us where we are from our chins tilt upward, and we say with pride that we are from Texas."

Arcos Found Sane by Jury

CONDEMNED MAN RETURNED TO PENITENTIARY TO EXPIATE HIS CRIME.

Luz G. Arcos, under examination in district court here as we went to press last week to determine whether or not he is sane at the present time, was by the jury found not to be in- sane, and was ordered returned to the penitentiary at Huntsville to await execution at the termination of his reprieve, between midnight and day November 7th.

The arguments of attorneys and the charge of the presiding judge consumed several hours, from the convening of court at 9 o'clock A. M. until about 3 P. M., when it was turned over to the jury. After delibera- ting about an hour and a half the jury returned a verdict of "No" to the question at issue, "Is Luz G. Arcos insane at this time?" Thus came to an end the effort to save the doom- ed man from paying the penalty for his crime by proving him insane.

After the verdict was returned, the court recessed and Judge Brucks went elsewhere in his district to hold a regular term of the court.

Lawyers for Arcos have filed a motion for a new trial, which motion awaits the action of the court.

Sheriff Charles J. Schuehle, ac- companied by R. A. Carter, Robert Decker and A. G. Bless, transferred Arcos back to the penitentiary at Huntsville Sunday where he was re- incarcerated in a cell in death row, and where, unless Governor Moody again intervenes, he will be legally electrocuted early next Friday morn- ing in expiration of his crime.

GOLDEN WEDDING ANNIVER- SARY CELEBRATED

On Sunday, October 26, 1930, friends and relatives gathered at the home of Robt. Riff, formerly the home of Domnic Riff and wife, to help celebrate the 50th anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Riff's wedding day. Rev. Homburg from Seguin came out to again perform the ceremony as he did fifty years ago. It again took place in the same room which was beautifully decorated. The bride was dressed in brown and the groom in navy blue serge as on the previous occasion. Between the bride and the groom stood a huge basket filled with golden fernery and eight golden cysanthemums, representing their eight children. On either side of the couple stood one of their little grand children, Genevieve Pearl Wisakowsky on the right of the groom and Ruth Marie Riff on the left of the bride, acting as little maids of honor; both dressed in white and carrying a white heart-shaped shield with the dates, 1880 and 1930, in gold respectively and above their heads hung golden sweet peas formed in a half-moon with the number 50 in the circle. The rest of the room was banked with fresh flowers of all kinds brought by friends and relatives. The trousseau and three easy chairs were presented to them by their children, they also received numerous other presents.

A bounteous dinner and supper, consisting of barbecued mutton, all kinds of salads, pickles, pies and cakes were served.

The afternoon was spent by hav- ing a short program consisting of songs, a prayer and talk by Rev. H. Homburg, a poem by Mrs. Homburg and Mrs. E. Wisakowsky, and a special song by the grand-children, and old time stories and experiences.

Among those present were Rev. and Mrs. H. Homburg of Seguin, the bride and groom and all their broth- ers and sisters now living. Namely, Mrs. Mary Boelhanwe, Mrs. Rosa Mc Cormick and Mrs. Mary Saathoff; and Mr. Geo. Bohmfalk and Mr. Ben Riff of Hondo, Texas. One sister of Mr. Riff, Mrs. Katherine Beetz, re- ceived the invitation to the wedding but died just two weeks before. This was the first death of Mr. Riff's brothers and sisters in some 60 years, when the oldest brother was killed by the Indians. Mrs. Jane Jordan, Mrs. Pearl Wisakowsky and Miss Myrtle Riff of San Antonio, Texas, and J. Henry, Robt. H. and Emil G. Riff of Hondo, Texas. One daughter, Mrs. Lydia Weber, could not be present on account of illness. Many other relatives and friends were present, too numerous to mention. Everyone enjoyed themselves im- mensely and before leaving wished Mr. and Mrs. Riff many more good years to come.

HON. CARLOS G. WATSON HERE.

Hon. Carlos G. Watson of Brown- ville, Republican nominee for Con- gress from the 15th Congressional District of Texas, and candidate for the seat in Congress now held by Hon. John N. Garner of Uvalde, spoke in the interest of his candidacy at the Chamber of Commerce Hall Saturday afternoon.

Mr. Watson thinks a Republican can accomplish more for this district than a Democrat, and of course he wants to be the Republican to do it.

It being a busy Saturday afternoon in town the audience was small and the speaker made his remarks brief in order to hurry on to Devine where he had an appointment for the night. He spoke in Castroville Sunday. Judge M. Schorobiny, County Chairman, met Mr. Watson here and accom- panied him on the rest of his trip over the county. The Republicans are making a vigorous campaign to carry Medina County for the Republican ticket this year.

There will be broadcast from Radio Station K. T. S. A., San Antonio, on Sunday, November 2, at 1:30 P. M. an address in the interest of the candidacy of Carlos G. Watson, of Brownsville, who is the Republican Nominee for Congressman from the 15th District.

The address will be delivered by Mrs. J. C. Griswold, National Repub- lican Committeewoman from Texas.

CROW-CLARK.

Mr. Horace Crow and Miss Edra Clark were married at one o'clock Sunday at the Baptist Temple in San Antonio with Rev. J. L. Yelvington performing the ceremony. Their only attendants were Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Crow and Mrs. R. G. Allen. Im- mediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Crow left on a trip to Dallas and other eastern points. They ex- pect to return the last of the week and will make their home in Hondo.

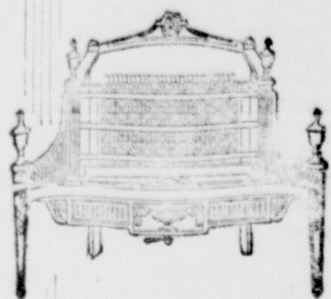

Horace is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Crow and Miss Clark is the youngest daughter of Mrs. Frank Tampke of Utopia. Miss Clark made her home here until she gradu- ated. She later finished a business course in San Antonio and for the past year or more has been employed by Western Union there.

"BARGAIN" ELECTRICITY.

A commodity or a service is cheap or expensive in direct ratio to its usefulness. Cost is a relative matter. Judged by this standard, electricity is one of the cheapest things the American public buys. We get it every day in the year at "bargain" prices.

During 1929, the average annual revenue received by the power industry from its 19,528,000 domestic customers was only $31.00. In other words, for about $2.58 a month the home owner can buy enough electricity to light his house, run his iron, toaster and refrigerator, and do a number of other tasks. The same amount of illuminating and motivating power, if furnished by any other comparable agency, would cost a great deal more.

In addition, he never has to worry about electric service. It is always there, controlled by the turn of a switch. It is the most efficient, elastic and adaptable power medium ever harnessed by man.

Clothes, food, furniture—practically everything we buy—now cost more than before the war. Yet electricity is sold at below the 1914 rate standard.

Facts such as these make it seem all the more amazing that the electric industry has been singled out for political attack. The average person pays less for his power than he pays for his tobacco or candy—and a great deal less than he pays for any other necessity. Perhaps this is why "professional denouncers" seem to be unable to get concerted support in their campaign for socialization of one of our greatest, most progressive and most essential industries.

BURNS WELL SHOTS OVER DERRICK.

With casing set at 2,311, about 55 feet above the bottom, the plug was drilled out Thursday evening and it shot over the derrick ten to twenty feet, or more than 100 feet high and the roaring could be heard in town, six miles away, when the wind was right. It muddies up and flows by heads, and it is still impossible to gauge. A 600 rock pressure gauge would not measure it and it is estimated at 1,200. The volume of gas, however, is not up to the rock pressure indicated, due possibly to baroid, a heavy substance pumped in to keep the well from blowing out until it could be cased. Sunday night the well was quiet. Gas from this well will probably be used in drilling other wells near. People continue to visit the well and it is freely indicated that, while this is not equal to the big wells in the Adams field; it is a very valuable well and indicates that a gas field will be made; probably several more wells drilled soon, in the vicinity of this well.

ANOTHER TRAIN LOAD SHEEP THIS WEEK.

Another trainload of sheep arrived at Devine one day this week. Seven car loads, 1,200 head, were unloaded here and the rest went south. The number being fed here now is around 5,000 head. They have been shipped in here from Del Rio country for fattening and some of them are now being sheared here. Devine will soon be shipping out her first cargo of wool, we suppose. The feeding of these 5,000 sheep requires about 7,500 pounds of mixed feed the day, which is being prepared by the feed mill here, in connection with the Devine Creamery.

TEXAS AND TEXANS.

"All Texans for All Texas"

Texas Leads in Gas

The Texas output in gas increased 44 per cent in 1929, making this the leading natural gas State in the country. The natural gas production in 1929 reached 169,928,000 cubic feet. The average price paid for the gas at the wells was 8.2 per cent. Much of the gas is now used in the North-Central States. Texas carbon black production increased about three-fold in 1929 over 1928, this product being made from low-priced gas. It is generally agreed that as yet the Texas gas and oil fields have hardly been touched.

Rusk County Oil

Oil discovered recently near Henderson—apparently in almost unlimited quantities—has given Henderson an oil boom on so large a scale that the town hardly knows what to do with the visitors. The Rusk County News has had all the business the editorial, business and technical staffs could handle, but announces that it expects to stay busy to keep just a little ahead of the growth of the town—as far as business will justify. That is a very Texas newspaper have. They don't allow oil magnates and promoters to get a bit ahead of them in spending their money in prospect developments.

Novel Economic Idea

A Texas auditor and accountant suggests that the State and its subdivisions accept 2,000,000 bales of Texas cotton at 20 cents a pound in settlement of delinquent taxes, take the cotton off the market and thus raise the price. This might be a pretty good idea if the delinquents had the cotton and would turn it in, and if the State and its subdivisions had the facilities for handling it. Apparently there are too many ifs to make this plan practicable.

Dimmitt Wins Prizes

For the sixth consecutive year, or ever since it has been exhibiting its products at the Texas State Fair, Dimmitt county has won first prizes in grape fruits and dates. This is something to be proud of and to take the Lower Rio Grande Valley up and take notice.

The county also had exhibits of oranges, pomegranates, Japanese persimmons, feedstuffs and vegetables that attracted much favorable attention. It should be remembered, too, that no other county produces better strawberries and Bermuda onions.

Distressing Farm Relief

The Waelder New Era says that the farmers who borrow money as a means of farm relief are in most cases those who do not need it, but who will need relief when their notes come due. That paper thinks that a loan a farmer money to enable him to produce more to sell for less than the cost of production is a distressing sort of relief. What farming needs is a profitable market for farm products, and for this co-operation is a first necessity.

Prohibition Prohibiting

A San Angelo man who was unable to pay a $2,500 fine for possession of a still and a $200 fine for possession and transportation of liquor may not be convinced that prohibition prohibits, but will agree that prohibition laws is expensive, as his 1,303 acre ranch was sold by a deputy United States marshal to satisfy the court fines.

Effort Is the Thing

The Bandera New Era says that Bandera has the river, the scenic beauty, the location and the resources to make for large growth, but that it fails to grow as it should for lack of effort. Not only is effort needed to build a town, but it must be united, co-operative effort. If the Hunter can get the right kind of support from a dozen Bandera citizens they can make the seventy-five year old town whiz, even if it is late in getting a start.

Pecan Marketing Associations

The practical working of local pecan marketing associations in Texas this season will be watched with much interest not only by pecan growers, but by producers of all kind. Organizations have been effected at Brownwood, Uvalde, Luling and Denison for the concentration of pecans on which advances will be made, the crop to be sold from time to time as may be needed. The marketing associations are under a National management and have the approval and support of the Federal Farm Bureau.

Corporations Generous

The old statement that corporations have no souls was certainly disproved by the generous responses of numerous out-of-town corporations to the Red Cross appeal for the aid of flood sufferers at Brady following recent overflows. Oil companies, utility companies, automobile companies, insurance companies, newspapers, mercantile companies, news-papers, other contributed most liberally, giving altogether about four times the amount raised locally for relief. In future it will be hard to convince Brady people that corporations are heartless.

New Club Needed

The Killen Herald says that "what Texas needs is an 'I-bought-it-in-Texas club,' with 3,000,000 members pledged to demand a Texas abate on every purchase, adding 'how many thousands of idle men and women would be summoned back to office and factory? What prosperity would descend upon the state?'"

Why Not Build It?

The Sabinal Sentinel calls attention to the need of a local mill to manufacture into mixed feeds the multiplied thousands of bushels of grain and other feed stuff grown here, and thus save the immense freight charges in sending the grains away, shipping the feed back, and paying the extra freight and manufacturers' profits as well as profits to two or three middle men. Sabinal is a good little town, has a number of sensible, prosperous business men, and they are well able to adopt this suggestion. Such a business could soon build up an outside trade.

Beautiful and Prosperous

New Braunfels is one of the prettiest towns in all Texas, with one of the prettiest parks in the State, attractive streets, lovely homes. With all this, it is an industrial town, having such industries as a large power plant, gingham mill, oil mill, ice plants, gauze mill, garment factory, whip factory, iron foundry, rock crushers, lime kilns and numerous other smaller industrial plants, which have an annual output of more than 29,000 cars or about 870 trainloads of home-made products annually. That is why New Braunfels is such a pretty town and why pessimists are so scarce there.

Letting Enterprise Lag

The Cuero Record says Cuero should be a "little ashamed of herself for letting the Turkey Trot die while other towns around are staging successful fair and celebrations." The Record is too timid in its statement. Cuero should be "heartily" ashamed. The Turkey Trot secured much national publicity for Cuero, and the idea was novel enough to have made the town famous had Cuero utilized it and added to it. As it is, Brady, with characteristic enterprises, has stepped in and profited by Cuero's initiative. Cuero is too good a town to have let such a good thing slip away from it.

Bankers Visit Texas

Martin Insull, who is largely interested in Texas utilities, has been making a quiet visit to numerous Texas points, accompanied by a group of Chicago and New York bankers. Doubtless the visit will be followed by renewed interest in Texas as utility investments and Texas stocks and bonds of various kinds. With capitalists, as with others, seeing Texas results in believing in the soundness of Texas investments.

At Chicago World's Fair

Texas has a commission, appointed by Governor Moody, to plan for suitable Texas representation at the Chicago World's Fair in 1933. James C. Kennedy, chairman, says, "For Texas to fail to seize this great opportunity to advertise its resources is unthinkable. Our commission is now functioning and will soon present to the people of the State definite plans for their approval."

She: Did you see that lovely Russian Count?

He: Is that an accomplishment for a grown man?

"This is a skyscraper," announced the guide.

Old Lady, "Oh, My! I'd love to see them work!"

Indignant one: Why don't you put "Wet Paint" on that bench?

Painter: I did.

Warden: Have you any last requests to make before I turn the current on?

Convict: Yes, what is the weather report for tomorrow?

TO THE CITIZENS OF THE 77TH REPRESENTATIVE DISTRICT OF TEXAS:

There is one other thought which I desire to express relative to the Constitutional Amendment changing the Legislative session from sixty to one hundred and twenty days and changing the procedure. This change in the length of time and legislative procedure is the practically unanimous verdict of the 181 members of the House and Senate as to what is needed to provide a practicable and business-like method for transacting the state's business—to raise the Legislature and its sittings in the public eye from being looked upon by many as a semi-joke—in other words, a chance, if you please, with proper methods for the Legislature to redeem and hold its proper place of respect and dignity as the representative expression and voice of a great people.

It is common knowledge that the Legislature of Texas, as a whole, has been, by many, lambasted, maligned and ridiculed and I think a great preponderance of the cause has been the inadequacy of the legislative procedure, and since the Legislature has expressed itself upon how it can better its procedure, it occurs to me that a voter who votes against granting them this request ought not to "cuss" the Legislature any more.

It is my belief that the other amendments, which raises compensation for the Legislature from five to $10.00 per day and reduces the mileage from twenty cents per mile to ten cents per mile, will work, not an increased burden upon the tax payer but will be less burdensome upon the tax payer than the present plan.

Some of the items of cost that will be saved by the new plan are as follows:

Mileage saved on 3 special sessions each 2 years. $ 36,000.00
Mileage saved on regular session under new plan by reducing 50% 6,000.00

21 days lost in the organization of three special sessions, it being generally conceded, and from a conservative standpoint, that not less than 7 days of the beginning of each session is lost in organization as far as actual constructive work is concerned, multiplied by $3,600.00 per day, which is the known average cost per day of a special session 75,600.00

Total $117,600.00

The increase of the salary amendment would be 120 days at $5.00 per day, making $600.00 multiplied by 181 members of the House and Senate, amounting in all to $108,600.00

This would show a net saving of $9,000.00 and would in my judgment be a much higher figure if one could determine the amount of saving that would be made in elimination of duplication of time, effort, printing and other expenses. I am not trying to argue with you that a Legislator is worth more than $5.00 per day, but trying to show you that it is my conscientious belief that, under the new method of procedure he could and would be worth much more than he is under the present cumbersome and inadequate system of not getting through with half of the business in the regular session of sixty days and then jumping over from one special in a jam and not very much construction to another—always resulting in a costly accomplishment.

Remember, there are two amendments pertaining to the Legislature—one fixing the terms for convening the Legislature, and the other amendment is the question of salary raised from $5.00 to $10.00 with mileage reduced from 20 cents to 10 cents per mile. These two separate propositions are to be determined by separate vote and, as I stated before, the first one above mentioned is far more important and, by all means, should be adopted.

Yours very truly,
A. P. JOHNSON,
Representative of 77th District.

ZEN of the Y. D.

A Novel of the Foothills

By ROBERT STEAD

Author of "The Cow Puncher"—"The Homesteaders"—"Neighbors," etc.

In the days that followed Dennison Grant drank his cup of rejuvination anew. He worked his fields early and late; he noted the tiny spirals of smoke ascending like incense from Zen's cottage; but he went no nearer the Transley home than the end of his furrow. He had handed back Transley's wife from the edge of the abyss; he had made up his mind; that much was settled.

The battle that raged within him now centered about Linder and Phyllis Bruce. When he had recovered from the first shock of Phyllis' revelation and was able to think sanely he was sure that her heart might still be his if he went after it—and took it. It was another case of a man being worth his salt. But Linder was not Transley. He had spared Transley; could he be less generous with Linder? And what of Phyllis? Would she be happy with Linder?

Then Truth stood up before him in the furrow, as he plowed its slow length one hazy summer afternoon, and called him a hypocrite. He heard the voice as clearly as the clamping of his horses on their bits. "Hypocrite!" cried Truth to him. "You make a great virtue of your generosity to Linder. Easy generosity that, while you continue to love—Zen Transley!"

Down by the river a spiral of smoke wound upwards from the Transley chimney, and even as Grant looked he saw an automobile trailing dust about the shoulder of his hill. It was Transley returning to his home.

Transley's wife had fortified her good resolutions behind an outburst of activity.

But there were times when the craving to be quite alone, where she could re-survey her life and bask for a moment in the luxury of old imaginings, became irresistible. On such occasions she would follow the road that skirted the cliffs of the river bank to a point where it turned in the basin of a now deserted quarry. The old quarry lay on the edge of the hills like a cup from which a side had broken and fallen into the river which boiled in a green foam a hundred feet below. The only access to this cup was by the road, no longer frequented, which Zen had chosen for his solitary rambles. Once inside the quarry she was isolated from the world; here her vision could sweep the sloping bluffs across the valley, or the circle of blue sky above, and her thoughts could rove at will without prospect of being interrupted. The road by which she entered the quarry was the road by which any intruder must enter it. It was also, as Zen was suddenly to discover, the only road by which one could escape.

It was upon the afternoon when Truth confronted Dennison Grant in his furrow that Zen made that discovery. Her self-imposed tasks completed for the day, she scoured the fruit stains from her hands, changed her frock, and took the now familiar trail up to the quarry. "I'll be back in an hour," she told Sarah; "I'm going to the quarry just to loaf and invite my soul." The quotation was lost upon Sarah, who took refuge in her gift of silence.

At a point where the road rose high enough to command a view of the surrounding valley she stopped and swung a slow, half-guilty glance to the southward. There, sure enough, was the plow team of Dennison Grant, warping its slow shuttle back and forth across the brown prairie. For a long minute she fed her eyes and her heart; then resumed her slow course to the quarry.

Inside the great cup she was conscious of a sense of security.

Zen seated herself in a half reclining position on a great slab of rock and fell into a day-dream, watching the while with unseeing eyes the procession of white clouds which drove across the disc of blue sky above her.

Perhaps it was because of the position which she had taken, or her unconscious study of the sky, that she caught no hint of the presence of a man at the point where the road entered the quarry. From an ambush of willow scrub he had seen her stop and survey the fields where Dennison Grant was at work, and had followed her stealthily down the trail which led to her trap. Now he had her.

"How do, Zen?" he said, suddenly stepping into the open. "Ain't you glad to see me?"

The girl sprang to her feet and turned startled eyes toward the road—the only exit from this stone dungeon.

"Who are you? What do you want? Go away! I don't know you at all!" The offensive smile broadened. "That is where I have the advantage of you, Mrs. Transley. I have changed, I admit, but you—you are as beautiful as ever."

"How dare you speak to me in such a way! You have learned my name, it is true, but I do not know you at all. Now will you go, or must I call my husband to throw you into the river?" "That would be some shout, seeing that your husband isn't at home, and hasn't been for two weeks. You see, I may be a stranger, but I know some things. And even if he was at home, wouldn't you be more likely to call Dennison Grant?"

The man had gradually advanced, but still kept himself well between Zen and her only avenue of escape. "Who are you?" she demanded again. "Why do you follow me here?"

"An old friend, Zen; just an old friend, come to collect an old account. Pay up quietly and there'll be no trouble, but raise a fuss and I'll throw you into the river. That wouldn't leave much evidence, would it? It's wonderful how a person who has been drowned disappears and is soon forgotten."

Zen's eyes had gone large and her limbs were shaking. "Drazk!" she exclaimed.

"Right enough; your old friend, George Drazk." He came up close to her and extended his hand. "Ain't you goin' to shake hands with your old friend, Zen?" he smirked before her.

"You were no friend of mine—never," she flared back, while her brain was hunting wildly for some plan of escape. "I thought I had killed you. And I was sorry I had done it. Now I'm sorry I didn't."

"Well, now, Zen, that's too bad. I was willin' to forgive you, and hopin' we'd be friends. Don't you think it would be better to be friendly-like, Zen?"

There was a menace under his oily words that gripped her in terror. She decided to play for time. Perhaps Sarah—perhaps Denny—if only Dennison Grant would come!

"Sit down, George, and tell me about it," she said. "I suppose I owe you an apology. Tell me how you got away, and where you have been all this time."

"That's better. We're goin' to be good friends, eh, Zen? The best of friends, eh, Zen? You and George 'll just sit down and talk it over."

She led him to the rock where she had been seated, and let him sit down beside her. He seized one of her hands in his; she would have withdrawn it, but he held it tighter.

"No, we're goin' to be good friends," he reminded her. "The best of friends—"

"Yes, but first tell me about yourself. How did you get out of the river that day?"

"Oh, I drifted ashore. Can't kill George Drazk. I was pretty full of water, and I lay on the bank for quite a while, but I came around in time. Then I seen what had happened about the fire, and I reckoned this was a good time to make my getaway. So I beat it right out of the country, and nobody bothered following."

"Yes, yes, go on," she urged, eager to keep him absorbed in his story. "That was very clever of you. And then what did you do—after you got out of the country?"

"Got a job. No trouble for George Drazk to get a job. Then when the war came I tried to get on, but somehow they wouldn't have me. Said I'd be more useful at home. So I stayed on and had some pretty good jobs and some pretty nice girls, Zen, but I never got you quite out of my head and I kept sayin' to myself, 'Some-time I'll go back and make it up with Zen.' And here I am. Ain't you glad, Zen?"

SMOKING AND ATHLETICS.

By Harrison Thompson,
For Two Years World's Champion
Decathlon Athlete.

Many of you can match my years, many of you can double them; nevertheless mine is the experience of one who has but recently been through this mill of facing the problem of tobacco. Tobacco in some form or other is getting to be so common that those of us that do not smoke must be apologetic.

Among young people it is particularly difficult to reason the thing out, because of the cleverness of the advertising of cigarette companies and the definite program that they have outlined to make cigarette smoking and tobacco using in all its forms, very attractive, a social grace. Magazines are selling advertising space to cigarette manufacturers and they use beautiful women as models and employ clever artists. They have gone even farther than that—they have purchased statements from athletes and coaches in almost every sport, so as to offer men and women who are interested in golf, in tennis, in football, in track, the testimonial of some well known athlete regarding certain brands of cigarettes.

Another thing about the use of tobacco by college men, from a point of physical condition, is this: many college men smoke outside of the football season, but for these few months they will quit smoking. The effect is about the same. There is not an accredited coach in the United States, who will in any way sanction the use of tobacco in any form for athletes. That statement should be sufficient in itself.

For every world's champion athlete there are three or four men who could just as well be in his shoes. Why aren't they? The answer may be in half a dozen things, but the answer is bound to be that they did not have the amount of efficiency that they were capable of.

I challenge the tobacco interests to make out a case for tobacco. If they can prove to me that a man can think faster at the end of an hour of smoking, that he will act more efficiently, and his physical reaction will be more efficient than that of a non-smoker, or at the end of five years the mental attainments are as exact, I will then take up smoking.

Now regarding these athletes who might have been champions. At this time I am thinking of a boy who ran hurdles within a fifth of a second of the world's record two years back, now at the age when he should be faster, he is not as good as he was two years ago. He smokes a little. Enough to slow him down.

Take two athletes, hundred-yard men, and let one of them smoke nine months a year, smoke a package of cigarettes a day, and let him train religiously for the other three months of the season and refuse to smoke. At the end of eighteen months I can guarantee the other man who has not smoked will lick the man who was a smoker even though the smoker was the best athlete at the start. That is as certain as the day's appearance, and any accredited coach in the wide world knows it. It is true in every other department of athletics.—The Shield.

Love's Labor Not Entirely Lost.

That I might be more graceful in your eyes.
I did my daily dozen faithfully;
Upon my face I lavished mud and cream,
So it would be more fair for you to see;
To have the slim physique that you admire,
I spurned my mother's good but fattening cooking;
And now, although you've left me, I confess
You've helped me to become much better-looking!

WHY TIME FLIES WHILE WE ARE BUSY.

From The Owl.

Father time is a tricky fellow. He seems to delight in being contrary or else he is a confirmed practical joker. He always does the opposite to what you want him to do. If you are anxious to have time move along at high speed he barely moves; if you want him to stand still he leaps a thousand leagues at once.

Time takes wings when we are having a good time because we are unaware of the sequence of events. Our minds are occupied with other things.

Time flies when we are busy for exactly the same reasons. In looking back to a busy day that is past it seems long because there are so many more events to make the day. As you recount each incident you are impressed with the succession of events in time. But during the immediate present the busier you are the faster time disappears because there is no break in the succession of events.

Another reason why time flies when we are busy is that we don't want it to go so fast. We keep hoping we had more time in which to accomplish a necessary piece of work.

This is true of anything desirable. There is never enough of it. A pint of ice cream seems little enough to a small boy even though it gives him a stomach ache; whereas a teaspoonful of castor oil is just a teaspoonful too much. Here is a fundamental principle of human conduct. The pleasant experience we tend to continue and the painful experiences we avoid as completely and quickly as we can.

Time is relative. It is relative to our interest or the lack of interest in what is going on. Time is accurate enough as measured by the clock and registered by the calendar, but it is like an accordion as registered by the mind. It may be squeezed into a small space or pulled out to tortuous length.

As sure as you become interested in what you are doing and forget time completely it will run away with you. To stay the hands and feet of time you must keep your eyes glued on the clock.

ARE YOU LOOKING FOR HATE?

If you are, never allow anyone to make a statement without disagreeing with his remark. If he is ninety-nine per cent right, find the flaw in the other one per cent and hold him up to ridicule.

This will usually succeed in making you the most detested man in town. If it fails, however, try featuring your pet topic at all times. If you are a golf fan, talk golf in the morning and at night to your wife, your doctor, your newsboy and your pastor. Never mind religion, politics, appendicitis or gall stones. Talk golf at all times, particularly emphasizing what you would have done on the tenth hole if something that happened had not happened.

There are other methods for acquiring the hatred of your fellow man. The editor will be glad to explain these thoroughly upon request.

TOO THOUGHTFUL.

The kind little wife has just informed her husband that she had mended a new hole in his trouser's pocket.

"Am I not thoughtful, dear?" she asked.

"You are, darling," he replied.

All the way down town he wondered how she had discovered the hole.

MEDINA COUNTY RANCHERS BUY NORTH TEXAS POLLED HEREFORDS.

Medina County cattle are well known in the Southwestern markets because of their good blood. In addition to those fattened for the market on the good grasses of this section and those finished on the feed lots of this section, hundreds yearly go to the feed lots in the Cornbelt States of the North. Great improvement has been made during the last several years by the use of pure bred bulls as herd sires in the commercial herds throughout this section.

Out on the Medina-Bexar county line, Schuchart Bros. have a herd of some 300 cows which they have been grading up for many years. To continue such improvement they have recently purchased four bulls, a cow and calf from Johnson Bros. of Jacksboro, who own and operate the world's largest herd of Double Standard Polled Herefords. These cattle are regular Herefords with the horns bred off, "Beef without bayonets." These young bulls will be added to the herd sire battery on the Schuchart ranches.

Three of these bulls are grandsons of Foundation 25th, the 1924 national polled grand champion bull. All of the purchases are of the best and most popular blood lines of the Here-

The community social and bazaar given last Friday night under the auspices of the Quihi Ladies' Aid society in the parish hall and on the lawn of the Lutheran church was attended by an exceptional crowd of people from adjacent towns and communities. The short program of literary and musical numbers was rendered well and greatly enjoyed by the large audience. Thus too did the sale of the many valuable and beautiful donated articles, the games and other features of the social afford pleasure and entertainment to all present. The committee of arrangements and all others interested in this social are greatly elated and gratified at the net results of this endeavor and sincerely thank all who helped by donations or otherwise and who, upon a few hours notice, turned out in such numbers and thus effected a splendid success.
